

PROJECT GOLDEN FALCON — Original Screenplay (v3)

Confidential — Seekra Films Creative Direction · Draft 3 · 5 September 2026

Written by

Yousef Al Saedi · Story by Sara Al Kindy & Yousef Al Saedi

FADE IN:

EXT. DUBAI DESERT — DAWN

A pale gold light spills across the dunes. A lone BEDOUIN RIDER crests a ridge on a grey Arabian mare. His kaffiyeh is streaked with sand. In his right hand he carries a brass telescope wrapped in oxblood leather.

The rider halts. He unwraps the telescope — it is ornately engraved with the image of a falcon catching a gazelle. He raises it to his eye.

POV — THROUGH TELESCOPE

Far across the desert floor, a CAMP. Soldiers in modern tactical gear. Three black SUVs. And there, kneeling in chains beside a water truck — a YOUNG WOMAN in a white thobe. Her hair is dark. She is looking directly at us, as if she can see through the telescope.

The rider lowers the telescope. He is shaken.

RIDER (V.O.)

(in Arabic, subtitled)

They have her. The falcon's daughter.

CUT TO:

EXT. AL FAHIDI HISTORIC DISTRICT — DAY

TARIK (38, lean, weathered) emerges from a wind tower house into the narrow sikkah. He carries an old leather satchel. The door behind him is hand-carved with a single symbol: a falcon in flight.

A BLACK MERCEDES glides to a stop at the end of the alley. Two men in dark suits step out.

TARIK

(to himself)

Yousef. Always early.

YOUSEF (45, gold-rimmed glasses, immaculate kandura) emerges from the Mercedes. He is smiling, but the smile does not reach his eyes.

YOUSEF

Tarik. My brother. I told you — three more days. Why do you make me come here?

TARIK

Three more days, three more weeks. The answer is the same.

YOUSEF

The Patron is not a patient man.

TARIK

Then the Patron should not have sent his soldiers to take her.

Yousef stops. The smile vanishes.

YOUSEF

(low, dangerous)

Be careful, Tarik. The old ways do not protect you anymore.

Tarik opens the satchel. Inside, nested in red velvet, is the brass telescope.

TARIK

The old ways are why she is still alive.

SCENE 12 — INT. ABANDONED CARAVANSERAI — NIGHT

This is the scene for which additional VFX work has been approved by the Board (Q3 meeting minutes, 15 September 2026). The caravanserai interior is lit by 400 candles and a single shaft of moonlight through the oculus.

Tarik unwraps the telescope. He places it on a stone altar. The falcon engraving begins to glow — a soft, golden light, pulsing in time with a heartbeat we hear but cannot source.

TARIK

(whispering)

Show me where she is.

The telescope lifts from the altar — slowly, impossibly — and rotates in mid-air. It points south. Through its lens, we see the camp from the opening scene. The Young Woman lifts her head.

FADE OUT.

END OF EXCERPT — Full screenplay 142 pages. Revision 3 locked 5 September 2026.

Genre	Thriller / Arabic Heritage
Runtime Target	128 minutes
Budget	AED 48.2M (with AED 2.0M contingency for VFX)

Director	Yousef Al Saedi
Producer	Sara Al Kindy, Seekra Films
Theatrical Release	18 December 2026